About the Capital City Lawyers Association and the CCLA Scholarship Foundation

The Capital City Lawyers Association (CCLA) is a local voluntary bar association comprised primarily of minority attorneys, judges, and elected officials. Established in 1981 in Wake County, the mission of the organization is to improve the quality of life for the local citizenry, including under-privileged and under-represented communities through service, scholarship, and education. Since its founding, the CCLA has left an indelible footprint on the Raleigh community in a myriad of areas including voter education, registration and mobilization; informing the populace on judicial candidates and elections; hosting free legal clinics; awarding scholarships to deserving law students; and providing social outlets for its members and their clients.

The CCLA Scholarship Foundation was created to provide scholarship opportunities to law students who are committed to using their legal training and skills to benefit low-income and/or traditionally underserved communities. To be eligible for the scholarship, the law student must be enrolled at one of the five Triangle-area law schools. Many of the recipients of the CCLA Scholarship are first-generation law students and college students.

2019 Scholarship Recipients

Mireya Colin Class of 2021, at Campbell University, Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law, comes from a long line of immigrants which fueled her desire and passion to work in public interest law and provide legal assistance to the underrepresented communities. Mireya looks forward to the day when she can practice immigration law in the Triangle area. Mireya is active at Campbell Law. She is a Student Ambassador, Secretary of the Hispanic Law Student Association, and a member of the Black Law Student Association. She also works on a number of pro bono projects including: the Death Row Visitation Project, the Innocence Project, and the Immigrants and Refugee Rights Project. This summer she completed an internship with the Battered Immigrant Project at Legal Aid of North Carolina.

Jasana A. Levy Class of 2019, at the North Carolina Central University School of Law, holds a number of leadership roles and is an active participant in her school's pro bono program. Motivated by her family who immigrated to the United States from Jamaica and instilled the importance of public service, Jasana works tirelessly to help and empower others in her community. She volunteers with many local organizations such as Durham County Guardian ad Litem, D.E.A.R, UNC Cancer Hospital, and World Overcomers Christian Church. Jasana will be graduating with her Juris Doctor and a Certificate in Justice in the Practice of Law and will begin working as a Clifton Everett Fellow with Legal Aid of North Carolina after taking the July Bar. Jasana is interested in various areas of law but is primarily focused on Public Interest Law, Criminal Defense, and Domestic Relations Law.
